STUDENT SPOTLIGHT:

Carolyn Rausch

Carolyn is a Senior Pre-Med student majoring in Health Science Studies. She has worked as a Certified Nursing Assistant (CNA) for the past several years. Please take a moment to learn how this experience has helped on her pre-med journey, and how you might also get involved!

If after reading this interview you have further questions for Carolyn, please reach out to Coco DiMauro@baylor.edu to get connected.

1. What is a CNA? How did you get certified? What is required for certification?

A CNA, or Certified Nursing Assistant, is a crucial member of the healthcare team, focused on providing hands-on care to patients. I became a CNA when I was sixteen and obtained certification through my local community college. Typically, the certification process involves about a month of classroom training followed by a week or so of clinical rotations, although the exact requirements can vary by state. This training provides with the skills and knowledge needed to provide compassionate care, including assisting with personal tasks like dressing, feeding, ambulating, etc.

2. What does a CNA do? What does a typical shift look like for you?

As a CNA, I do a variety of tasks, and my days never look the same. I start my typical 12.5-hour shift by taking report from the previous team and communicating with the nurses about any changes in patient care plans or conditions. Then, I dive into the day by introducing myself to patients and checking their vital signs and blood glucose levels. Throughout my shift, I'm there to assist with whatever patients need such as feeding, bathing, toileting, or dressing. I respond promptly to their call lights, ensuring that they're comfortable and cared for. As my shift winds down, I share the day's highlights with the next CNA on duty, making sure they're up to speed on any important changes.

3. Don't CNAs do "gross" work? How do you get used to this type of work?

While it's true that CNAs handle tasks that some might consider "gross," like assisting with toileting and bathing, these responsibilities are vital for patients' well-being. We play a crucial role in helping patients recover and maintain their dignity and independence. Getting accustomed to this type of work comes naturally when you recognize its significance. Plus, it's a reminder that, someday, you or a loved one might rely on someone to provide the same level of respectful and dignified care during a hospital stay. It's all about compassion and understanding the fundamental importance of what we do.

4. Why should pre-health students consider becoming a CNA?

There are several reasons why pre-health students should consider working as a CNA. First, it's a sneak peek into healthcare, helping you decide if it's calling. Second, it greatly enhances your interpersonal skills. While CNAs are not the ones diagnosing patients or administering medications, we're at holistic patient care, including emotional support. We're the cheerleaders during tough times, the empathetic listeners, and the steadfast support system. These interpersonal skills are golden in healthcare, and they're hard to pick up in formal training. So, it might be valuable to consider becoming a CNA to build clinical experience and boost these skills!

5. Are you able to balance your schoolwork with your CNA work? How?

Juggling schoolwork and my role as a CNA been very doable. Right now, I am working PRN (Per Diem), which means that I work every other weekend. This leaves me with enough time to tackle school assignments and keep up with my other activities. Plus, I work the night shift, which has its perks – I get a bit of downtime to crack open my laptop and work on some homework!

6. Is there anything else you'd like students to know about CNA opportunities?

I'd say to all pre-health students out there, give being a CNA a shot. It might not be everyone's cup of tea, but it's a fantastic window into the healthcare world. Plus, you're surrounded by doctors, nurses, and therapists, so you get a real feel for all the different roles in healthcare. You also get a front-row seat to a lot of medical situations, which can really boost your understanding of medicine and medical lingo. So, dive in and explore a CNA opportunity – it's a gateway to a world of healthcare insights!

CURE BU: PHILIPPINES

Medical-Ministry Mission

HEALING THE SICK
PROCLAIMING THE KINGDOM OF GOD

What? Where?

We will spend two weeks during the May Minimester 2024 in Batac, Philippines. We will visit a multispecialty teaching hospital and shadow physicians, surgeons, and nurses. We will also visit a local orphanage and have the opportunity to work with and minister to children, acting as the hands and feet of Christ.

Why?

Our goal is to provide students pursuing careers in healthcare with the opportunity to experience the intersections between medicine and Christian ministry, grow in their faith and calling, and appreciate the practice of medicine in a different culture.

Who?

Due to the heavy medical nature of this visit, students in pre-health and allied health (pre-med, pre-PA, pre-PT, pre-dent, pre-nursing, public health, health sciences, dietitian, etc) will be prioritized. Further priority is given to active CURE BU members, but everyone is able to apply.

Deadline: November 8th
